Central Library Narrative and Statistics for CLAC- August 2014

Narrative

Central

I visited the Clyde Public Library and the Red Jacket Public Library as part of the Expanded Training Pilot Project. Attendance was excellent at Clyde for both classes and the response from patrons and staff was great. Sue Ayers said,

"Thanks so much for doing these classes. Both that you have done so far are great. I have heard many great comments about yesterday's class. Who knew Google had so much! I have been happily filling up drive and calendar and playing with maps. You've created a whole new obsession. Love it. Looking forward to the next 2!"

Unfortunately, attendance at Red Jacket has been minimal. This may be because the classes were scheduled while Stacey Wicksall was the Library Manager and information and excitement for the classes did not transfer over. However, the split in results between the two libraries transfers greater importance to the feedback from the upcoming classes in Victor, Wadsworth, and Warsaw.

Wendy, Kelsy, and I met with Lindsay and Ron from PLS to investigate the possibility of removing the CBA sub library from Evergreen. Right now, materials that are purchased with Central Library funds are stored under a sub-collection called CBA. The basis for this is largely to delineate between books purchased with local GPL funds and books purchased with Central funds. Since there are other ways to parse this information and since the current system causes workflow issues, we have agreed to pursue removing the CBA sub-collection.

I am scheduled to present at the August Birds of a Feather on the uses of Google Chromecast for in-house publicity.
