DON'T FORGET

The more corroborating records you can find, the more genealogical proof you have that you're following the right ancestral line. For example, search military, immigration and land records.

1 LIST WHAT YOU ALREADY KNOW

Download an ancestral chart and fill-in your family tree with what you know about your parents, grandparents, etc.

2 INTERVIEW RELATIVES

Older generations may know the occupations that family members held, where they are buried, and stories that will help with your research.

SEARCH LOCAL SOURCES

Once you verify names and locations, you can start looking in the local publications for stories about your ancestors and the area.

GET DEATH RECORDS

The most recent record of an ancestor will be the death record. It will provide valuable information and clues about the individual.

SEARCH CENSUS RECORDS

Use census records to discover and validate where the person lived and who is in the family.

FOLLOW DEATH RECORD CLUES

Once you have the death record, you can narrow your research to a specific location that can provide additional records.
